Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion

I have always been fascinated by the way people and organizations grow through change. That curiosity has guided me across three continents and through more than 15 years of work in human resources, change management, and digital transformation.

Today, I serve as Manager of Talent Acquisition at Red River College Polytechnic, where I lead strategies to bring in the right people and create opportunities for them to thrive. For me, talent acquisition is not just about filling positions, It is about shaping the future of an institution, building inclusive practices, and making sure people feel they belong.

Over the years, I have led change management transformation projects, built recruitment strategies from the ground up, and designed leadership programs that continue to make an impact long after they launched. I have worked with organizations in education, consulting, corporate, and non-profit sectors, but the common thread has always been people, helping them find meaning in their work and supporting leaders to see what's possible.

Beyond my professional role, I give back to the community through volunteering, supporting organizations that share my passion for equity, community, and development. Teaching and mentoring are also close to my heart, and I continue to guide emerging professionals and students as they chart their own paths.

Simisola Ajayi

Stakeholder Management

Simisola Ajayi is the Leadership Giving Officer for the Asper School of Business at the University of Manitoba. She is responsible for building and strengthening relationships with donors, alumni, and community partners to support strategic priorities and enhance the student experience. Before joining the Asper School of Business, Simisola gained experience as a Business Development Manager in the technology sector, where she honed skills in relationship-building, strategic engagement, and identifying mutually beneficial opportunities.

Simisola approaches philanthropy as more than fundraising; she sees it as a relationship-based business discipline grounded in communication, and long-term value creation. Her approach integrates principles of marketing, strategic communication, and stakeholder engagement to support meaningful connection within the Asper community.

Simisola is an early-career professional committed to lifelong learning and building expertise in nonprofit business strategy and institutional development. Her interests also include organizational leadership, the evolving role of philanthropy in higher education, and how nonprofit environments use business principles to create measurable outcomes.

Simisola is passionate about sharing her experience with the next generation of business leaders. She hopes to help students understand that Donor Relations is not simply about requesting support, but about cultivating authentic partnerships that shape futures, open opportunities, and create long-term impact.

He has held multiple roles relating to program development, relationship management, and stakeholder engagement throughout his life. He holds his Bachelor of Commerce (Honours) from the Asper School of Business and the Leadership Intensive Program Certificate from Asper Executive Education.

Since graduation in 2019, Riley has been working for Indigenous Business Education Partners (IBEP), a department in the Asper School of Business. He progressed from Student Intern to Director. As Director of IBEP, he works to support Indigenous business students through program development, academic supports, and community building.

Riley co-chairs two committees within the Asper School of Business; the Committee on Indigenous Business Scholarship and the Visionary Indigenous Business Excellence (VIBE) Awards Committee. Community development and support have always been part of Riley's core tenets. Through his work on these committees, Riley has the opportunity to assist in both the fundraising and the disbursement of funds in order to promote Indigenous community building with the Asper School of Business.

In his free time, Riley enjoys sports, cycling, weightlifting, and weekly trivia nights with friends.

Birchwood

My professional journey began after graduating as an international student from the Asper School of Business with a B. Comm in 2021. During my studies, I had the opportunity to join Birchwood as a Business Analyst Co-op Intern, which evolved into a full-time Business Analyst position upon graduation.

In 2023, I was promoted to Asset Manager, taking on the responsibility of leading Birchwood's central Appraisals & Pricing team. This role allowed me to further develop my leadership skills & contribute towards significant operational improvements by leading multiple projects, including streamlining customer trade-in experience as well as development & implementation of a market analysis & forecasting software.

Recently, I have transitioned into a new leadership position, now leading & overseeing Birchwood's central Used Vehicle Services division. I am a member of two operations committees at Birchwood: the Used Car Committee where I work with executives, directors, & GMs to streamline our used vehicle operations groupwide, and the Wellness & Inclusion Committee where I work with fellow committee members to roll out team member wellness & inclusion initiatives.

Committed to continuous improvement, I have earned a Black Belt in Lean Six Sigma, graduated from Birchwood University's Leadership Academy, and am currently pursuing my Automotive Dealership Management designation through Georgian College.

Professional & Career Development

Ashley Smith is the studio leader for Ubisoft Winnipeg. Ashley helped open the AAA video game publisher's Winnipeg studio in 2018. She is passionate about her career bringing together local and global tech talent in Winnipeg's techno-creative district and supporting women in the tech & video game industry.

Ashley's career path has been non-linear. She went to 3 Universities (STFX, U of Winnipeg, U of Manitoba), changed majors twice (Science to Arts, Psychology to Sociology) in her four year degree, finally graduating in 2009 with her Bachelor of Arts, Sociology (honours). She also switched careers from social work (she was a community support worker and Immigrant Settlement worker) to HR where she has worked in several industries; transportation (CN Rail), manufacturing (Masterbrand), technology (Bold Commerce), and video games (Ubisoft). And now leading the Ubisoft Winnipeg studio as the managing director.

The competitive advantage/edge Ashley has brought in her career is embracing change when new interests and passions have been sparked. She wasn't afraid to change careers or roles. Her work in social work and HR has given her unique skills and perspective for her career now as a leader of a AA video game studio.
